INTERESTING FROM THE WEST COAST Arrival of the Steamship

Entertainment on Board Hor Majosty's Ship Devastation, prompt delivery of papers and correspondence. Our Panama Correspondence, PANAMA, April 16, 1864.

The purser of the Champion has our thanks for

Carthagena before the sailing of the last steamer for New York, and the mailbag had reached Panama, yet, there being no appropriation that allowed the payment of twenty cents for carrying it from the railroad station to terest in connection with the outgoing of Mosquera and the incoming of Murillo, and show conclusively, is part of the conservatives and better class of the people

29th of February, and was received by numerous salutes and the accismations of the people. Whether the inites but a strong impression prevails that greater de tions of joy would have prevailed had he been leaving the city forever rather than entering it. A committee turn. His reply to a speech made by Senate commission is very characteristic of the man vices during half a century, and the necessity that one and the same should cease to be heard in the high effect, where the citizen obeys, and not commands. I know the dangers that threaten once more the public liberties, and in the constitution is written the duty of the citizen. The illustrious republican to whom I have to give up our the 1st of April the seat from which I speak to you knows that he can depend upon my assistance as he depends upon my friendship; and if fanaticism and interestance should unite to prolong the misfortunes, then all of us Colombians must support the new magistrate in the axercise of his functions, and with him the hely cause which our fathers invoked, and for securing which we count more than half a century of fighting and progress in the path of civilization. With a week hand I grasped the arms fifty years ago, and if I have gained some honor in the public service it will be nothing if I do not obtain that my last services are worthy to deserve—that my fellow citizens place my name side by side with those who, like Bolivar and Washington, have deserved to be admired by the people."

Best the last nat of that paragraph if it is possible.

who, like Bolivar and Washington, have deserved to be admired by the people."

Beat the last part of that paragraph if it is possible, and note the remark, "and for securing which we count more than half a century of fighting and of progress in the paths of civilization." I agree with him perfectly in regard to the fighting; but as for progress in the paths of civilization, I should like to have pointed out to me how. In any one way, there has been advancement is civilization. On the countrary, in my humbla, opinion, every day clearly demonstrates the fact that not only is there has progress in the way spoken of, but every step is backward with a rapidity that is fast changing this people from civilizate to a state but little removed from barbarism. These who have been living in the country do not see the change as those who were here twelve years since and have returned within a tew months. If lite, and becoming more and more degraded every day, it will require better long that some strong hand shall interfere, and, by establishing a strong government, and one of the proper kind, keep the country from becoming once more what it was when Colombus first discovered the new continent.

Informed you in my lart that it was the desire of Mosquera to have onacted a law against the clergy much more severe than the one now in existence. How far he desires to carry this crusade will be seen from the following extract from a message addressed to the President of the House of Representatives on the 5th of March, regarding the clergy and the revolution in antioquia. He says:—"These measures ought to be, according to my opinion, and for the present time, that of sending immediately out of the republic those minusters of religious denominations who do not, without any reserve, addition or condition, take the legal sabt-to obey the constitution, laws and authorities of the republic and of the State in which they reside, and to submit to and respect the severeignty of the nation, they being free ale any time to return to the contry when they, having taken better advice, will submit and take the said oath. Prelates and dignitaries of the religious denominations, if they are not tolombians, are not to be admitted into the republic without the passport or permission of the mational Executive; and heavy jenuities have to be summarily imposed upon those who receive, circuiate, full or make to be fullide bulls, encyclicals, briefs or other ecclesiatical decrees or mandates that come from foreign parts, who ever may be the religious denominations they belong to, before they have been examined by the same Executive and obtained the corresponding permission."

In regard to the rebuilded will, the circuity of the general government and State by tores, and for this case Congress and the Executive makes the submit of the general government, and became and print of the displace of the submit of the internation of the submit of the
